“ I know most of you know that Deb was sick, but most of you didn't know just how really sick she was. Besides what most know about her failing kidneys; she did dialysis every other day for years. But this courageous person also had heart disease; triple bypass. Leukemia, lymphoma, Breast Cancer and advanced arthritis, that did not allow her to walk the last couple of years, with many many side effects from each and every one of these on a daily. Each and every one their own medications. Endless hospital and rehab admissions for days, weeks and a couple of times a month or more. She had been told by doctors on separate occasions she was a miracle. She encountered pain & discomfort daily, she learned to chose her battles with complaining, choosing only the most horrific to voice....but, yet I had heard her in conversations where someone was complaining to her about a headache, sore shoulder or maybe surgeries and Debbie would just sit there in sympathy expressing things and ideas to help them rid of their pain, because that's just what she did.

...you'd think that was enough to make anyone want to give up huh? Not Debbie, not for one minute!

I tell you these details not seeking sympathy; as I know she hid much of it not to seek sympathy. I tell you these things because I want everyone to know just what a tireless and strong warrior she really was. Without a doubt the strongest person I have ever known. My cup of pride in her runnth over. Debbie lived and she lived hard. She loved and she loved hard; people & life. All of life's knocks gave Debbie a rough exterior. I'm not just talking about knocks form her illnesses, but from her youth and growing up as well. Things she never spoke much about. Those of you that stuck around to find out what the inside of my sister was like, was lucky enough to find a loving, gentle, caring, peace, making, giving beautiful soul. Those of you that chose Debs friendship found this to be true and then some. If Debbie was your friend, she was your friend for life.

I want all of her friends to know what happiness they brought Debbie. I want you to know when she said she cared, she did care. I want you to know when she said she loved you, she loved with her whole heart.

My brain tells me she's out of pain and at rest, her body now whole in Gods healing arms, being grateful for that isn't even a strong enough word.... But also knowing her unbelievably strong will to live, to be with family, friends and her beloved pets.... I find my tears selfishly still wants her here with me. I know if our roles were reversed right now, she would be so much stronger than me, ironically she always thought I was the stronger....once again, not giving herself credit that she so rightly deserved. Debbie was, is and will continue to always be my personal hero.

You are indeed a champion by anyone's terms. I love you Deb

“ Already missing you like crazzzy!

Keep waiting to hear you yell out for me, to get you some ice.

Bailey is missin' her "momma", dearly. Breaks my heart to see her running up to the gate, thinking you are coming.

I hope you found Mom with open arms. She's been waiting for over 30 yrs, to hug you. 😊

Rest easy, Debbie. You were so very, verry tired these past few weeks. 'Til I see you again, sweet sister of mine.
