“ Thinking of my mother today and always. I just wanted to stop by and share a little note, for her. Each day that comes and goes, I try and make more sense of losing my mother so early in life. She would definitely want me to be happy and move on with my life, and I have. However, it's with never forgetting her and always thinking of a new and different memory each passing day. I continue to love her more and more each day!~~~ Laurie

“ I spent my 41st birthday, on July01, 2013, without my mother by my side. I could feel her with me, but it was just so difficult not to be able to put my arms around her and just hug her... Tell her how much I love her. I also spent my 40th birthday, last year, without her. I must have still been numb to losing her, because it hurts even more this year. I remember my mother's smile and get to see it every day, thanks to the beautiful portrait that Raymond's gave us. It hangs in my living room, so I can see her every day! I miss you momma'!!! I wish you could be here to see Jac, living life and being so successful. She has found the love of her life!! His name is Jamie! You would love him, too!! Jac is so happy, but she will always miss her Mam-Maw!!!
