“ I first met MawMaw, as we affectionately knew her, when I was in first grade approximately. I remember her smile told me everything I needed to know. This person was special. Her kindness and understanding knew no bounds. Growing up in the Martin/Wilcher family gave myself and my siblings some of the most memorable moments of our childhood. One summer when MawMaw and PawPaw were visiting Kim, Mike, and Mandy, MawMaw and PawPaw saw I was trying to dive from the diving board and they sat outside with me all day giving me advice and encouragement until finally in the late afternoon I dove off that board into the warm pool water like a champ! When I came to the surface again there was applause and whistling. I will never forget that summer day and how it felt to have such kind people take me into their hearts as if I was their own granddaughter.

As I got a little older MawMaw and I found time to talk about crocheting and art and classic tv shows we loved. When it came to tasty eats MawMaw knew her way around a kitchen! It always got me though when she would eat the yellow fat in the blue crabs shiver; but MawMaw always said "don't knock it till you try it" and I still think of those words anytime I see something new and maybe peculiar. She passed her yummy eats on to her daughter Kim who passed some of them on to me.

Jamming in the big ole Crown Vicki with Maw Maw was the best. I LOVED running errands with her, windows down on a hot summer afternoon, classics blasting over the stereo and her beautiful long platinum hair blowing from around the clip trying to hold it up. I don't think there was ever a time I saw MawMaw anything but happy.

I had a rough time growing up. No matter the troubles that came my way, though, MawMaw and Kim always had an understanding ear, a kind word and sound advice. The whole family stuck by me through thick and thin for 32 years now. I am now 37 years old and all my childhood memories include MawMaw and the Martin Family.

This is truly a great loss for myself and for everyone who knew

Mrs. Mary. MawMaw and PawPaw are finally together again now and that is the silver lining in it all. They waited a very long time to see each other again. It gives me some comfort to know they are lovingly watching over us now, happy together.

*I love You MawMaw, you will always be in my heart and my thoughts.
So long for now.*
