“ My dad was such a great guy! He wasn't the best with the phone I had to call him several times to get him to pick up. Then he got good at it and would call me all the time. He would hang up and call right back and say one more thing I wanted to tell you. I would laugh because I knew he was going to do it. Even sometimes I would answer the second time and he would say I forgot when I remember I will call you back... I would call the police for a well check visit if I couldn't get a hold of him in a couple of days. They would say he is smiling and doing good and he would call me. One time I was calling many times in a row and keep getting text message I will call you back. He did not know how to text..I was so scared. I called the police I was freaking out I said someone must have him held in his apartment using his phone. They rushed there and said he was smiling and ok. Thank God. He must have hit a button that auto responses a text. The police showed him the button and helped him with his phone.

His thoughtfulness was so sweet when I brought my grandkids to see him just for a visit he always had something for them. He would say the first of the month the thrift store has 50% off and he would go and buy the good stuff...lol

His gifts were always different. John's last gift was so heavy.. He loved it and said he would never get rid of it.
